

From the Desk of the Editors:

The last issue (December issue) of the volume 1 of this journal is being published though with some delay due to certain technical glitches occurred – regarding processing of the selected articles and finally in internet network. It was scheduled to be available online from the winter solstice and we must apologise to the authors and the readers. This issue, like the previous ones, consists of the articles of different types and from different scientific disciplines. From the next volume (for 2015) we hope to provide article templates in .doc as well as in .tex format in our website and will request the authors to submit their materials using those, which may considerably reduce the processing time of the editorial team. The publication of the first issue of the next volume is slated to be published on the next vernal equinox.

The experience of publishing volume 1 was quite enriching with a wide response from scientific workers of different corners. The full list of articles with authors of that volume will be available separately when the full volume will be archived in the journal page. But we expect from the next volume to get submissions with more number of students' projects and articles drafted in Bengali. So it is an open call for everyone to contribute more particularly in these sections. Wish everyone a very happy New Year!
