

Editorial

This is an opportunity to extend our gratitude to all the contributors of the articles in publishing the second issue of the second volume of Quest: Multidisciplinary Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences. Without your support it was impossible for us to sustain our journey over the year. The objective of the journal is to highlight the academic works which are contemporary, interdisciplinary and innovative in nature.

The focus of this journal is to draw our attention to the significant issues related to various aspects of our lives at large in the society. Moreover we even want to make a discourse on every trivial issues related to our existence as a human being in the society. Quest has provided us a platform where we literally reflect all the perspectives of life as a conscious, psychological, social, political and religious being and this issue is a perfect example of that.

The variety of the articles in this issue is sure would be appreciated by the readers. The articles, particularly in this issue, are actually a reflection of the truth hidden in our peripheral world and an analysis and understanding of our thoughts and deeds in search for the significance of our entity and our role to manage our own life in the society or rather for the betterment of the society.

Quest: Multidisciplinary Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences is a platform, where all the senior academicians, practicing teachers, research scholars and students exchange their views and ideals over multiple disciplines. We hope this approach would enable all of us to express and exchange our unique and innovative ideas to enrich academic community of higher education.